Dear Commissioner Henney,

Like any other human being, I am very concerned about the safety and the risk of the food I selected to be consumed. As a consumer, I believe that is my right to know whether my food has been genetically modified and therefore I have enough information to see whether I buy certain type of products.

In spite of a lawsuit that was filed challenging the Food and Drug Adm.'s policy that does not require labels on genetically altered foods, I hereby, support the lawsuit's demand for safety testing and complete labels. Nobody should be tested without knowing it or literally treated like lab animals and risk themselves with potentially dangerous food. I am very interested to hear that the Food and Drug Adm. is giving up to its mandate to protect the public health and will provide all the information we need to know about the food we consume.

Sincerely,

Vania Winardi
